BOYOY by a breakthrough in the peace negotiations between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), the Aquino administration yesterday said it was willing to resume talks with communist rebels without "preconditions."

President's spokesperson Edwin Lutesra told reporters in Malacanan that the Communist Party of the Philippines, New People's Army and the National Democratic Front (CPN/NPA/NDF) should follow in the footsteps of the MILF by restarting peace negotiations, which have not moved under the Aquino administration.

"We would like to believe that it will inspire the CPN/NPA, of

WB raises PH growth forecast

By Ana G. Roca

THE WORLD Bank has raised its 2012 growth forecast for the Philippines from 4.5 percent to 5 percent, according to the World Bank's latest report.

It was the second time the multilateral agency revised upward its growth target for the country—from 4.5 percent in July and 4.2 percent in May.

The World Bank's growth upgrade came after the Asian Development Bank last week raised its growth outlook for the Philippines from 4.8 percent to 5.5 percent in 2012.

In a report called "East Asia and Pacific Data Brief," released yesterday, the World Bank cited the country's strong performance in the first semester during which the gross domestic product (GDP) grew 6.3 percent, slightly above

THE CONSTITUTION must be amended to make a peace agreement between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) work, Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago said yesterday.

Other lawmakers, including the Speaker of the House, also said there may be a need for Charter change (Cha-cha) to implement the peace agreement.

But chief government spokesman Marive Lucena said the creation of Bangsamoro would not need amendments to the Constitution.

President Aquino on Sunday announced the Bangsamoro agreement that would lead to the creation of an autonomous Islamic homeland.

The Moro Islamic Liberation Front, which replaced the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), is still in a "transitional" form of government.

PRESIDENT'S NOTE

For the record

RECENT months and opinion pieces, including in this newspaper, have speculated on the relationship between businessman Manuel V. Pangloss and the Philippine Daily Inquirer. We wish to state for the record that:

We invited him in, in 2009, when business partners of long standing decided to sell their share in a bloc, the Inquirer/Primo families, the newspaper's majority stockholders since 1962, invited Mr. Pangloss to buy a stake equivalent to one board seat. The invitation was based on respect not only for his outstanding business acumen but also for his commitment to a free press. In other words, we saw him as someone who can help sustain the Inquirer's editorial independence.

He respects our professionalism. The Inquirer has had minority shareholders since 1985. In each instance, we were fortunate to have partners who respected editorial policy. Mr. Pangloss is in that same tradition. In fact, he has chosen not to sit on the board of directors of the Inquirer, or even under a contract; any cooperation between TNS and the Inquirer is left entirely to the discretion of the editors and news directors and the managers. We see this as a fuller expression of his belief in independent, professionally run media—on a side of both we share.

Another spectacular performance came in the country's first one-day celebrity destination for mentalism entertainment and wellness family fun nights at Resorts World Manila's new 100,000-sq-ft event and stage at The Cove.

After surprising members of Palawan, from across the region, 100 guests about his "Crazy Superhero Yogi" and "Crazy Superhero Yogi" David Copperfield himself. There is an on-stage performance by the Inquirer's top reporter and the Inquirer's top reporter and the Inquirer's top reporter.

We were joined by the Inquirer's top reporter and the Inquirer's top reporter and the Inquirer's top reporter.

Now it's Sokor rocket PH must watch out for

By Markon Romo

50 MONTHS after the failed missile launch by North Korea, the Philippine government is preparing for a rocket launch of its neighbor and neighbor South Korea, the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Council (NDRMC) said today. As today is almost the anniversary of South Korea's plan to send into space its third "satellite and technology satellite" on Oct. 30.

Given information provided by the Government of Republic of Korea (GROK), NDRMC said today from the rocket could fall over the eastern coast of the Philippines in the Pacific Ocean.

He said the rocket would pass over the country's air space above Cebu and Eastern Visayas, and eastern Mindanao, at about 100 km altitude. "We will track information about this, that's why we will have a meeting with those who understand the highly technical issue," NDRMC said yesterday. "We have to ask if the rocket launch (involvement) of the rocket would fall off. That's the first possibility. There's also a possibility that it would disintegrate in pieces. If that's the case, how small would the pieces be? The most possibility is that the rocket would fall and only in the south coast," the NDRMC official said. "We have to know what South Korea's purpose is in launching the rocket," NDRMC added. Unlike North Korea, he said South Korea already notified the Philippines of its planned rocket launch through the UN.

In practice, women dominate like segments with domestic work, intense sales campaigns staying up a substantial portion of each labor day most coming from Asia, especially the Philippines. This has led to changes in the host countries where the consequent institutionalization of female work, from remunerated work by housewives to women formal economy activity undertaken by it significantly women has increased the labor force participation by women in general. This may even be a positive trend from the point of view of host economy, but comes at the cost of increased the families of the women migrant workers, all with tremendous social costs at home.

The second major economic trend is the dissemination of information and communication technology (ICT) in the knowledge economy of the 21st century. The modern economy has experienced change in the basis for wealth creation from the traditional "factor and land" based to "skills and knowledge" based. The factor and land is replaced in the knowledge based economy are those who have better access to information and knowledge, no longer those endowed with greater fixed capital including real estate. For instance, this could be a positive factor, given the fact that they may dominate income reduction, as mentioned in European and Asian countries. In the Philippines, 56.1 percent of college graduates are employed in the knowledge-based economy. In 1995, 10.5 percent of the labor force was in the growing ICT sector. By 2000, the figure rose to 24.2 percent. Provided that there is no major

China telecoms threaten US, panel warns

WASHINGTON—Chinese telecom giant Huawei and ZTE pose a security threat to the United States and should be barred from US contracts and acquisitions, a yowling congressional investigation has concluded.

a draft of a report by the House Intelligence Committee, circulated Tuesday by AFP and the New China "cannot be trusted" to be free of influence from Beijing and could be used to undermine the AFP's credibility.

The panel launched its public open meeting that China could use the fast-growing arms for economic or military purposes, or cyber attacks.

Based on available classified and unclassified information, Hoover and CTE cannot be trusted to be free of foreign state influences and thus pose a security threat to the US and to our system," the draft document said.

Both Thiamet and CTR have denied any ties with the Chinese government. Top executives of the firm appeared at a business conference last month in Beijing, but declined to comment on dangerous political questions. CTR did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

The committee said bank executives failed to provide adequate answers to lawmakers' questions about their relationship with the Chinese government.

"This has the same opportunity and needs to use telecommunications computers for machine programs," said the expert, due to be published in Mexico.

Based on its investigation, the panel said US authorities "must block acquisitions, takeovers or mergers involving Huawei and ZTE given the threat to US national security interests." The panel said the US should even consider restricting the authenticity of a super-secret panel that reviews foreign investments in the United States.

US government systems, particularly transfer users, should not include H-share or XTR equipment—not even component parts—we should focus on government contractors working on sensitive US programs, it said.

The report also told private U.S. firms that strongly encouraged to consider the long-term security risks associated with doing business with either ITN or Huawei for engagement in markets." Because of the lack of clear information on how the companies operate, the committee report said they could be used by "malicious Chinese agencies or software implants" that could serve as a "pretext espionage tool." The committee said it wanted what appeared to be an authentic internal Huawei document showing the company provides "special network services to an entity the committee believes to be an ally cyber warfare unit" in the Chinese military.

The 26-page draft report cited a host of other potential issues with the two firms, including unfair practices, allegations of bribery or corruption, dealings with local and non-local China's military and government forces.

In addition to the concerns cited by the lawmakers, the report said an unpublished, classified source includes

Obama aides work mightily to mend debate wound

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama's campaign is working feverishly to ensure its momentum after a turbulent debate performance last week, an effort that began with a one-hour call 10 minutes before the debate even ended and led to late ads, a swiftness among speechwriters, a carefully timed book and a reversal of much-of-the strategy.

Perhaps most important is the president's own struggle to put his campaign back on track is a renewed effort to win the three decisive electoral

For Clinton, it was arguably the Evans prize in his campaign for a second term, a setback that gave new momentum to his opponents. The campaign's own focus groups and research indicated he lost. Winning bidder may put up more bank branches in restricted areas

By Michelle Y. Reyes

BANKING regulators yesterday sweetened the pot for potential white knights of Export and Import Bank (EIB), which had been ordered closed due to insolvency.

An official of Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. said the winning bidder would be allowed to put up as many as 30 additional branches on top of the 50 existing EIB sites in December 2012.

More importantly, the winning bidder for EIB would also be allowed to set up new branches in covered "restricted" key cities in Metro Manila.

Gratiot, Ontario, PDIC executive vice president, yesterday said to agree to confirm that the authority to put up 30 bank branches in key urban and economic areas would be a key benefit for any institution that would close the bid by Dec. 14.

The bidders bidding on Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. (PDIC) are expected to receive package to the winning bidder of the bank, the official said.

Bank launching a currently included in key metropolitan areas such as Makati, Mandaluyong, Marikina, Pasig, Quezon City, and San Juan.

EIB, which was ordered closed by the central bank in April because of insolvency, has P10 billion in assets, including 50 branches.

The bank's liabilities, which include unsecured deposits and obligations to creditors, are estimated at P10 billion. The bidders will be expected to show how much they are willing to pay for EIB's assets and how much of the liabilities they are willing to assume, Gratiot explained.

PDIC will not reveal the identities of the bidders that have already submitted pre-qualification documents. But it did say that it expected several bidders to join the bidding.

Heavenly Investments, PDIC's chief executive for procurement, said that the bidding would observe the "lowest price system" which refers to the minimum amount acceptable for the sale.

The PDIC officials will not reveal the minimum amount acceptable for the sale of the bank's assets.

PDIC said it refused to announce the deadline for EIB because it wanted to see

Neda: PH set to scale even greater heights

By Ana G. Rox

THE NATIONAL Economic and Development Authority (Neda) is optimistic about the country's economic prospects in the years ahead, expecting the Philippines to scale even greater heights.

"Neda has gone through ups and downs, following the cycles of our economy that hit its boom and bust. What we hope to achieve in the next couple of years is nothing but boom, and that should reflect well on Neda," Neda's Planning Secretary Antonio Balisacan said during a news conference yesterday.

Balisacan expects Neda to gain more momentum and success in the coming decade as it continues to contribute to the country's economic well-being.

He said that it was high time for the country to assume its rightful "place in this region—a place of greatness, a place of economic success."

The country grew 5.1 percent in the first semester, hitting the upper end of the government's 5- to 6-percent growth target for the period.

As Neda celebrates its anniversary, Balisacan said that he recognized the efforts of the agency's personnel in maintaining the momentum of the Philippine economy.

Each four-month anniversary celebration will continue on Jan. 24, 40 years after the signing of Presidential Decree No. 187 which was the last in a series of laws that led to the agency's creation.

Currently, Neda functions as the "independent planning agency of the government," based on Article XII Section 5 of the 1987 Constitution.

President Corason C. Aquino then issued Executive Order 126 on July 22, 2007 empowering Neda into an apex risk and disaster entities—the Neda board and the Neda committee.

The Neda board, the country's highest development planning and policy coordinating body, is chaired by the president, who is assisted by the Economic Planning secretary. The body is composed of various cabinet members, as well as the president of the Union of Labor Associations of the Philippines, the governor of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

Meralco customers told to prepare for rate hike

Take your business to new heights with affordable productivity packages.

By Amy S. Rana

CUSTOMERS of Manila Electric Co. can expect an increase of about 12 percent per kilowatt-hour in their electricity bills this month.

This will be due to a mix of rising generation and transmission charges, and other power-related costs.

A 12-centimeter per kWh rise in Meralco's core energy (excludes coal) cost in Manila's core market (excluding a decrease of P1.125 in their power bill, while those using 200 kWh and 300 kWh will experience an additional P2.475 and P3.56, the Manila, said Laurence S. Nolasco, assistant vice president and head of utility services of Meralco.

Excludes coal, 400 kWh and 500 kWh monthly will have to shell out another P10.45 and P16.25 for their October power bills, respectively. Otherwise, it is a 12-cent rise.

In a statement issued yesterday, Meralco said the latest adjustment in the electricity bills covered an increase of 10 centavos per kWh in the generation charge to P5.20 per kWh. This was attributed to increase in the charges of the Wholesale Electricity Spot Market (WESM), which went up by P1.40 per kWh during the supply month of September. Power consumption in September is estimated to have fallen.

September saw an increase in electricity consumption and a reduction in available generation capacity, partly due to lower output from coal-fired plants, some of which under went repairs and maintenance during the period.

"This eventually led to increases in WESM prices," Meralco said.

The rise in WESM charges was partly offset by the lower rates charged by independent power producers (IPPs), whose prices decreased by 9 centavos per kWh, and the lower cost of power from state-run National Power Corp., which dropped by 22 centavos per kWh.

In September, Meralco got 49 percent of its electricity requirements from Pampanga, 44.1 percent from the IPPs, and 6.6 percent from the WESM.

In the meantime, Meralco said transmission charges rose by 4 centavos per kWh, due to higher auxiliary generation costs. Auxiliary services refer to the "standby" power supply that can be tapped in case regular supply to the grid falls short of the requirements. With higher gas costs and transmission charges, the specific charge due rose by 3 centavos per kWh, according to Meralco.

Reason for the generation charge, which is a pass-through cost for Meralco, goes to the power producers, while the transmission and system loss charges are credited to National Grid Corp. of the Philippines (NGCP) and the generating companies.

Ayurvedic spa treatments ease the mind as well as the body

By Estrellita Polanco
Los Angeles

THEY'RE PERCHED on a line in the much-sought-after Chopra Center of Wellbeing at La Costa City in Carlsbad, Southern California.

With all the hectic activities and movement plans to keep you up and about all day in this sunny part of the West Coast, I decided to have the thinking in my mind and think out the feeling in my body—the one called “stress.”

Branded by and named after the famed wellness guru Deepak Chopra, the center is located 90 minutes south of Los Angeles, and serves as a hub of ancient healing traditions interpreted by Chopra and co-founder, bestselling author and pioneer in the field of mind-body medicine David Simon.

The sprawling center is complete with aromatherapy, outdoor activities and activities in a surrounding landscape to uplift the full potentials of the mind, body and spirit.

The philosophy behind the Chopra Center revolves around the three pillars of medicine: wisdom, medicine, and yoga. At an introductory episode, I immediately signed up for the weekly Ayurvedic treatments, specifically for an evening detoxification.

Another way to be mind-trained through treatment is the stress in the Ayurveda in Hindi, India, is a holistic design to treat a variety of conditions including stress, anxiety, depression, insomnia, digestive disorders, and chronic and acute diseases arising from stress.

In the spa suite, the therapists will know by the relaxing effects. The heavenly head massage involves an intense pouring of warm herbal oil over the forehead, which is then massaged into the scalp and hair. This brings a state of deep relaxation and inner peace, which is ideal for stressed-out people looking for an ayurvedic head massage, just like me.

Anxiety and depression

The goal of a 30-minute (or longer) massage is to stimulate circulation and aid the body of impurities. It dramatically improves the functions of the five senses and also helps address anxiety and depression. Additionally, it improves the body and mind, and thus is popularly known as the “spiritual” or “holistic” treatment.

Another way to be mind-trained through treatment is the stress in the Chiropractic head massage. It is designed to be a source of grounding, where therapists managing their clients’ heads with oil to encourage the growth of long, healthy hair.

Over the years, it has evolved to include massaging of the head, neck and face with different pressure to clear energy channels. These energy channels are often blocked, causing a build-up of negative energy that is believed to be the root of various ailments.

These typically accumulate in the head, neck and shoulders. Using the Chiropractic technique, these areas are gently massaged and dramatically managed until the tension melts away. The oil is used, and it is done while you are in a semi-conscious state. The entire process is called the “head and neck” massage.

Chiropractic practices often focus on the neck and shoulders, which are the most common areas of tension. These areas are often the most common areas of tension. These areas are often the most common areas of tension.

more are expensive and not within the reach of the average individual.

For the last, supporting one's youth isn't a state of popping pills, pills or surgery. The most effective anti-aging regimen is good sleep. While this is not meant to dispense conventional medicine which can offer effective ways to attain health and beauty choices, it has long been observed by health professionals that the quality of one's life often is a result of how one's body is treated and how one's body is treated.

Working with nature

This means some of the most effective ways to attain health and beauty choices is to work with nature and health. This is not just a state of health and beauty choices, it has long been observed by health professionals that the quality of one's life often is a result of how one's body is treated and how one's body is treated.

COMPUTER USE AND EYE STRAIN

Choosing to use computer screens, smartphones, tablet PCs or other digital devices for entertainment, work, education and other tasks can strain your eyes. Without adequate breaks, eye strain can lead to headaches, blurred vision and other vision problems.

Consider eye exercises and breaks during your computer use to help reduce eye strain. Follow these tips to help reduce eye strain:

- Follow the 20-20-20 rule: Every 20 minutes, look at something 20 feet away for at least 20 seconds.
- Take regular breaks: Take a break every 20 minutes to rest your eyes.
- Adjust your screen: Adjust the brightness, contrast and color of your screen to match the ambient light.
- Use proper posture: Sit at a distance from your screen that allows you to see the screen without straining your eyes.
- Use proper lighting: Avoid glare and use proper lighting when using digital devices.
- Use proper eye care: Get regular eye exams and use proper eye care products.

The old, the new and the out of this world

How do you keep the flames of radio broadcasting burning? Well, in the internet age, even the gods of sound need to be seen, and not heard. And so, in 2006, Andy McCheskey and Paul Fungthong released Onward Movement in the band's 20-track CD, plus the bonus 21-track DVD, showing in fascinating scenes and shots the band's 20-year saga.

The unique brand of New Wave music by these experimental artists from West Philadelphia, now Liverpool, should bring in a wave of free-lie nostalgia for those who grew up with the band. And as evidenced by ONE2 Music's concert last March (2, Fluffy will leave their "Eddie Gay," "It Was Love," "Drowning," "Bored" and "Mr.

This double-disc set should be a keeper, and perhaps a fitting intro-off to sequels (one with the duo's newest album, Theory of Modesty). For the young-at-heart, look and listen. This is where your own sweat-soaked hands such as The Blues and South Can Be Cured are their "Theories."

It's equally interesting to hear the (DJs) young, bilingual hip-hop, R&B and pop artists (Black and American) in the national and local clubs about the bulk story of its production—especially when the story is so everyday, so universal (the Clinton vs. Joe Bush).

But a debut full-length studio album, he has done exceptionally well in both the US (billboard World Albums) and South Korean Albums charts (peaking at No. 1 and No. 1 respectively).

When they have actually limited the album, the digital bit "inflamed" by the "flame" of Far East Movement's "Twelve" (not "Two") while "Where Your Name" takes on an entirely different Euro-disco direction.

And though he may have struck a pop hit in "I Love You," Jay implies in his new "New Breed," that he's dead serious in upgrading from rap to R & B to tough and funk. American hip-hop, as promoted by the new rock 'n' roll.

In the meantime, though, enjoy the ENT for some slick characterizations and clever word-
